Establishes new voting method: voters score candidates from zero to five stars

Result of “Yes” Vote: “Yes” vote establishes new voting method: voters score candidates zero to five stars. Between two candidates with most stars, winner is candidate more voters preferred.

Result of “No” Vote: “No” vote maintains current voting method. Voters select only one candidate for each position on ballot. Candidate with most votes on single tally wins.

Summary: Measure establishes new voting method in which voters score all candidates from zero (worst) to five (best) stars, instead of casting single vote for an office. Equal scores allowed; blank score considered zero.

Candidates’ total stars across all ballots counted to determine two highest-scoring finalists. After finalists identified, each ballot counts as one vote for whichever finalist received more stars on that ballot. Finalist with most votes wins. In multi-seat elections, process repeats until seats filled. Includes tiebreaker provisions. Authorizes Secretary of State to adopt rules.

Applies to primary and general elections for president, congress, and state offices.
Applies to local government elections unless a different method adopted. Primary elections for nonpartisan offices eliminated unless jurisdiction chooses otherwise. Ballots include information about process.
